Forms of competitive activity, usually physical
The 2005 London Marathon: running races, in their various specialties, represent the oldest and most 💶 traditional form of sport.
Sport pertains to any form of physical activity or game,[1] often competitive and organized, that aims to 💶 use, maintain, or improve physical ability and skills while providing enjoyment to participants and, in some cases, entertainment to spectators.
[2] 💶 Sports can, through casual or organized participation, improve participants' physical health.
Hundreds of sports exist, from those between single contestants, through 💶 to those with hundreds of simultaneous participants, either in teams or competing as individuals.
In certain sports such as racing, many 💶 contestants may compete, simultaneously or consecutively, with one winner; in others, the contest (a) Tj T* BT /F1

Some sports allow a "tie" or "draw", in which there is no single winner; others provide 💶 tie-breaking methods to ensure one winner and one loser.
A number of contests may be arranged in a tournament producing a 💶 champion.
Many sports leagues make an annual champion by arranging games in a regular sports season, followed in some cases by 💶 playoffs.
Sport is generally recognised as system of activities based in physical athleticism or physical dexterity, with major competitions such as 💶 the Olympic Games admitting only sports meeting this definition.
[3] Other organisations, such as the Council of Europe, preclude activities without 💶 a physical element from classification as sports.
[2] However, a number of competitive, but non-physical, activities claim recognition as mind sports.
The 💶 International Olympic Committee (through ARISF) recognises both chess and bridge as bona fide sports, and SportAccord, the international sports federation 💶 association, recognises five non-physical sports: bridge, chess, draughts (checkers), Go and xiangqi,[4][5] and limits the number of mind games which 💶 can be admitted as sports.[1]
Sport is usually governed by a set of rules or customs, which serve to ensure fair 💶 competition, and allow consistent adjudication of the winner.
Winning can be determined by physical events such as scoring goals or crossing 💶 a line first.
It can also be determined by judges who are scoring elements of the spo
